HR Health Check... includes the following:

- An assessment of compliance with key employment legislation. For example, do you check the eligibility to work of all employees, do you have disciplinary and grievance procedures in place and do you have an up-to-date equal opportunities policy?
- A discussion on how your organisation is getting the best results out of its most important resource – your people! For example, does your recruitment process work, are your managers equipped to lead, is your workforce flexible and motivated?
- A review of key employment documents such as, your contract of employment and your HR policies and procedures.

DID YOU KNOW?

The number of Employment Tribunal claims in 2009/2010 increased by 56%.

Previously the number of claims brought before the Employment Tribunals was approx. 150,000 but last year this number increased substantially to 236,000.

This has been attributed to the difficult economic climate.
